19TH CENTURY ENGLISH BATTLESHIP OAK AND BRASS BUCKET WITH ROUNDED FORM

$1,250

Crafted in England during the 19th century, this handsome oak bucket features a classic rounded silhouette and is reinforced with three solid brass bands. The combination of warm-toned oak and the soft golden sheen of the brass creates a visually appealing contrast that feels both rustic and refined. The bucket's tapering form is well-proportioned, with a wide top and narrower base constructed from thick, joined oak planks that speak to its durable, utilitarian origins.

A closer look reveals a metal label affixed inside the rim, reading "Made from Battleships of Britain," referencing its material provenance and adding character to its history. The surface shows light signs of wear and use, consistent with age, adding to its decorative charm.

Ideal as a fireside log holder, umbrella stand, or even a cachepot, this antique English bucket offers timeless utility. Its clean lines and aged materials make it equally suitable for traditional interiors and modern rustic settings. A sturdy and well-executed piece, it stands out for both function and provenance.
