19TH CENTURY ENGLISH CARVED WOOD CONVEX BULLSEYE MIRROR

$2,850

A 19th-century English convex bullseye mirror with a circular carved wood frame and projecting convex glass plate. The frame is decorated with layered carved ornamentation, including rounded repeating motifs and scrolling foliate details, giving the piece strong relief and decorative presence while maintaining a restrained English character.

The convex mirror plate projects prominently from the frame, creating the distinctive reflective distortion associated with traditional bullseye mirrors. The carved wood frame has a pale distressed finish, giving the ornamentation a lighter and more relaxed appearance while still emphasizing the depth of the carving. The scale makes the mirror easy to place in a hallway, library, powder room, bedroom, or within a collected gallery wall arrangement.

With its compact diameter, carved surface, and architectural depth, the mirror offers a decorative accent that works well in both traditional interiors and more layered contemporary settings. The pale finish gives it a less formal presentation than darker mahogany or gilt examples.
