19TH CENTURY ENGLISH DOG AND GAME STILL LIFE SPORTING PAINTING

$7,995

A 19th-century English sporting painting depicting two dogs set beside a still life of game, including pheasants and a fox, within a wooded landscape. The composition is anchored by the dogs in the foreground, with one seated and the other alert, creating a clear focal point against a softly receding background.

Executed in a warm, earthy palette, the painter uses controlled highlights to define the dogs and game, set against a loosely handled landscape with trees, fencing, and distant sky. The arrangement combines animal study with still life elements, consistent with traditional Victorian sporting imagery. Brushwork is direct and decorative, prioritizing subject clarity and atmosphere.

Presented in a later molded wood frame with burl-style veneer detail.

Strong, readable subject matter with broad appeal—well suited to traditional interiors, studies, or sporting-themed settings.
