19TH CENTURY ENGLISH GILT TRUMEAU MIRROR WITH HUNTING SCENE OIL PAINTING

$12,000

This tall English trumeau mirror combines the narrative charm of a 19th-century countryside hunting scene with the architectural elegance of giltwood framing. Painted in oil on canvas, the upper register depicts a lively rural tableau: a hunter taking aim, his dog alert in the foreground, with other figures and dogs animating the pastoral landscape. A small turreted structure in the distance adds depth and a hint of the estate life that once shaped such scenes.

The gilt frame is richly carved with classical detailing at the corners and midpoints — rosettes, acanthus flourishes, and beaded trim — lending structure and decorative refinement. Beneath the painting, a clean glass mirror offers practical reflection while balancing the vertical format of the piece.

Ideal above a mantel or anchoring an entryway, this piece marries storytelling with presence. Whether placed in a country house or layered into a collected, eclectic interior, it brings warmth, history, and a painterly focal point to any wall.
