19TH CENTURY ENGLISH MAHOGANY STOOL WITH TURNED LEGS AND UPHOLSTERED SEAT

$2,100

This English mahogany stool, crafted in the 19th century, is a testament to the refined craftsmanship of the period. The solid mahogany frame is defined by its turned legs, featuring rounded baluster forms and subtle ring details that add depth and character. The wood has developed a deep, warm patina over time, enhancing its rich grain and natural luster.

The seat has been newly upholstered in a neutral, textured linen fabric, offering a fresh yet timeless update. Its smooth, tailored finish highlights the crisp lines of the frame, allowing the beauty of the mahogany to remain the focal point. The combination of elegant simplicity and sturdy construction makes this piece as practical as it is stylish.

Versatile in function, this stool is ideal as a refined footrest, a convenient occasional seat, or an understated accent at a dressing table. Its compact proportions allow it to slip easily beneath a console or be placed at the foot of a bed. Whether styled in a traditional, rustic, or contemporary setting, this 19th-century mahogany stool lends an air of effortless sophistication to any space.
