19TH CENTURY ENGLISH PINE CRICKET TABLE WITH ROUND TOP AND TURNED LEGS

$3,995

A charming 19th century English cricket table crafted in pine and retaining a warm honey-colored surface developed through age and use. The circular plank top is supported by three elegantly turned and tapered legs, joined beneath the top by a simple triangular apron that gives the table its characteristic sturdy, economical construction.

Cricket tables originated as practical pieces of vernacular English furniture, their three-legged construction making them particularly stable on the uneven stone and timber floors of country cottages and rural interiors. This example has a pleasingly light and graceful profile, with more refined turning to the legs than is found on many heavier rustic versions.

The broad round top shows the marks and variations of a long working life, giving the table an appealing, unpretentious character. Its compact proportions make it especially versatile today: it could serve as a side table beside a sofa or armchair, a lamp table, or a small occasional table in a bedroom, library, or entryway. The warm pine surface works beautifully in both traditional interiors and more pared-back contemporary spaces.
