19TH CENTURY ENGLISH SHERATON STYLE MAHOGANY FOLDING DEMI-LUNE TABLE

$5,500

An elegant late 19th-century English mahogany folding demi-lune table in the Sheraton style. Designed for versatility, the table presents as a refined demi-lune console when closed, while the hinged top unfolds to create a larger table surface.

The restrained neoclassical design is particularly attractive. The apron is veneered in richly figured mahogany and outlined with fine contrasting stringing, while small rectangular satinwood panels accent the blocks above the legs. Four slender reeded legs taper toward turned feet, giving the table a light and graceful appearance despite its practical expanding construction. The mahogany top has a warm, softly aged surface and a molded edge.

Its dual-purpose design makes this antique English table especially useful in interiors where flexibility matters. Closed, it can stand neatly against a wall in an entrance hall, living room or dining room. Open, the hinged top provides additional surface space for entertaining, games, serving or occasional dining. The warm mahogany, delicate inlay and slender proportions give it an understated elegance that works comfortably in both traditional and more layered contemporary interiors.
