19TH CENTURY FRENCH WALNUT SIDE TABLE WITH TURNED LEGS AND STRETCHER BASE

$3,750

A 19th-century French walnut side table with a single drawer, turned legs, and a shaped stretcher base joined by a central finial detail. The table features a rectangular top with molded edge and inset panel construction, giving the piece a strong architectural presence while remaining compact enough for use beside a chair, sofa, or bed.

The walnut displays a warm medium-brown tone with visible grain and patina developed through age and use. The turned legs and stretcher supports add depth and visual weight to the form, reflecting traditional French craftsmanship of the period. A single drawer spans the front and is fitted with an iron ring pull, providing useful concealed storage while maintaining the restrained character of the piece.

The proportions make it versatile as a side table, lamp table, end table, or occasional table in both traditional and layered interiors. The table retains age-related wear throughout, including surface marks, finish variation, and minor losses consistent with 19th-century use, all contributing to its antique character.
