ANTIQUE ENGLISH LEATHER FOUR-PANEL ROOM DIVIDER, EARLY 1900S DECORATIVE SCREEN

$11,000

This English turn-of-the-century four-panel leather screen from circa 1900 is a statement of antique craftsmanship and classic elegance. Each panel is covered in hand-dyed leather in shades of warm green and ochre, complemented by decorative tooling that frames each section with precision. The subtle mottling effect on the leather enhances its vintage charm, creating a rich texture that captures the eye. The warm wood borders add structure and elegance, beautifully framing the leatherwork and lending a sense of solidity to the screen. The piece is decorated on both sides. This room divider offers versatility in both form and function, easily adaptable to various settings. Place it in a living room to define spaces or create a cozy reading nook; its warm tones and antique appeal will blend seamlessly with traditional or eclectic interiors. Alternatively, use it as a sophisticated backdrop in a bedroom or office, adding privacy and an element of historical charm. This piece not only serves a practical purpose but also brings an artisanal touch, reflecting the quality and style of early 20th-century English decor. A stunning and functional addition to any home, this screen showcases timeless elegance and craftsmanship.
