ENGLISH 19TH CENTURY MAHOGANY SERVING TABLE WITH SINGLE DRAWER

$12,600

An elegant English 19th-century mahogany serving table, designed with long, refined proportions and a warm polished surface. The table features a broad rectangular top with a shaped front apron and a single central drawer fitted with a decorative brass foliage-themed ring pull. The drawer is flanked by curved apron sections, giving the front a graceful movement rather than a strictly straight architectural line. The piece stands on slender tapered legs with spade feet in the lower section, creating a light but formal profile.

The mahogany has an attractive golden-brown tone with darker figuring and natural variation across the top and apron. Its long, narrow scale makes it especially useful as a console table, serving table, hall table, or dining room side table. It could also work behind a sofa or along a long wall where a substantial but not overly deep piece is needed. The single drawer offers practical storage for linens, flatware, stationery, or small household objects.

With its restrained English form, handsome mahogany surface, and decorative brass pull, this 19th-century table has a quiet country house elegance suitable for both traditional and layered interiors.
