ENGLISH 19TH CENTURY OAK SIDEBOARD WITH BRASS HARDWARE AND EBONIZED COLUMNS

$12,600

An English oak sideboard from the 19th century, distinguished by its balanced façade and subtle contrasting details. Measuring 67.5 inches wide, 21 inches deep, and 36 inches high, the façade is organized with three upper drawers, a smaller drawer below the central section, and a lower register featuring two paneled side cupboards flanking a pair of petite double doors.

The richly grained oak displays attractive quarter-sawn figuring across the doors and top, highlighted by a warm patina. Flanking the central section, a pair of turned ebonized half-columns introduces contrast and depth, framing the symmetry of the drawers and cupboards. The sideboard is further accented with period-style brass hardware, including decorative backplates and shaped pulls, complementing the paneled construction. Bracket feet and a shaped apron provide support and balance.

Originally intended for use in a dining room or estate interior, the sideboard was designed to store silver, linens, and serving pieces while presenting a formal appearance. Today, its scale, elegant detailing, and subtle play of oak and ebonized elements make it an ideal addition to a dining room, library, or reception space, where its 19th-century English character can be fully appreciated.
