ENGLISH CARVED OAK WALL MIRROR WITH EGG-AND-DART MOULDING, CIRCA 1920

$3,995

A handsome English wall mirror in oak, dating to circa 1920, distinguished by its classical carved detailing and well-proportioned form. The rectangular frame is enriched with a continuous egg-and-dart moulding along the outer edge, complemented by stepped inner mouldings that create depth and visual structure.

The oak presents a warm, golden tone with visible grain and subtle variation, lending the piece a sense of material richness without excess ornament. The carving is crisp yet restrained, reflecting early 20th-century interpretations of classical motifs adapted for domestic interiors.

Its scale offers versatility—large enough to anchor a wall above a console or fireplace, yet balanced enough for use in a hallway or bedroom. The depth of the frame and the repetition of moulding details give it a more architectural presence than simpler examples, making it particularly effective in traditional or transitional settings. T his is a decorative yet grounded piece, combining classical influence with the durability and character of English oak.
