ENGLISH CAST STONE SEATED DOG SCULPTURE, MID-20TH CENTURY

$3,750

A charming English cast stone sculpture of a seated dog, dating to the mid-20th century. The figure is modeled with a naturalistic yet slightly stylized approach, depicting a calm, attentive dog with gently defined musculature and soft facial features, reminiscent of a Labrador or similar breed.

The surface retains a pale, weathered finish, with areas of natural wear and patina that enhance its character and give the piece an authentic, timeworn presence. Subtle irregularities and surface variation contribute to the sculptural quality, while the simple rectangular base provides stability and a grounded silhouette.

Pieces of this type were often used in garden or porch settings, though the scale and finish also allow for effective indoor use, particularly in entryways, beside a fireplace, or as part of a decorative vignette. Its neutral tone and classic subject make it versatile across both traditional and more relaxed interiors.

This is a decorative object that combines familiarity of subject with a pleasing sense of age and texture.
