ENGLISH CIRCA 1920 CARVED STONE GARDEN DOG SCULPTURE ON INTEGRAL BASE

$2,850

A charming English carved stone dog sculpture dating to the early 20th century, circa 1920. Depicting a seated dog with attentive expression and naturalistic modeling, the figure is rendered with soft yet defined carving, particularly visible in the folds of the neck, fur texture, and gentle facial features.

The sculpture rests on an integral stone base and presents a well-balanced silhouette from all angles, making it suitable for placement in a garden, entryway, or interior decorative setting. The proportions — 29 inches high — give it presence without overwhelming a space.

The surface shows a naturally weathered patina consistent with age and outdoor exposure, with subtle tonal variation and mineral staining that enhance its character. The carving style suggests English garden statuary production of the early 20th century, likely intended as a companion piece or decorative estate ornament.
