ENGLISH GEORGIAN MAHOGANY BEDSIDE CUPBOARD OR NIGHTSTAND, CIRCA 1810

$2,850

An English mahogany bedside cupboard dating to the late Georgian period, circa 1810. Tall, narrow and elegantly restrained, the piece was designed to provide useful bedside storage without occupying much floor space.

The rectangular top is bordered on three sides by a low gallery with softly rounded ends, creating a practical surface for a lamp, books or personal belongings. Below, a single cupboard door opens to reveal an undivided interior compartment. The door is finished with simple molded edging and fitted with a decorative brass knob centered by a floral motif.

Four slender square legs extend directly from the cupboard case and taper subtly toward the feet, giving the otherwise practical form a light, refined profile. The mahogany has developed a warm, varied surface, with attractive grain and gentle color variation visible throughout.

Originally intended as bedroom furniture, this compact Georgian cupboard remains particularly versatile. Its narrow proportions allow it to serve as a nightstand beside a bed, a small side table next to a chair or a decorative pedestal in an entryway or living room.
