ENGLISH MIDCENTURY TEAK BENCH WITH CARVED ROSETTES AND SLATTED SEAT

$2,850

An English teak bench from the mid-20th century, featuring a light natural finish, slatted construction and decorative details inspired by Anglo-Indian furniture. The rectangular seat is composed of closely spaced teak slats and accommodates two people comfortably, while gracefully curved open arms provide an elegant silhouette.

The back is structured with horizontal slats centered by a vertical support and enriched with symmetrical carved decoration. Radiating geometric elements terminate in carved floral rosettes, while concentric circular motifs punctuate the design near the sides and center, creating a lively contrast with the otherwise linear construction.

At the front, the arms descend into turned supports above slender turned legs, while the rear legs extend directly from the back uprights. The teak has been given a pale, bleached appearance that emphasizes the grain and carved details while lending the bench a relaxed, understated character.

With its compact proportions and combination of geometric and floral ornament, this midcentury English teak bench offers an appealing decorative presence without appearing overly formal. It would work particularly well in an entrance hall, sunroom, covered terrace or casually furnished interior.
