ENGLISH PINE WALL MIRROR WITH SIMPLE MOULDED FRAME, CIRCA 1900

$2,950

A restrained English wall mirror in pine, dating to circa 1900, defined by its clean proportions and warm, natural surface. The rectangular frame is constructed with a simple moulded profile, allowing the character of the wood to take precedence over ornament.

The pine has developed a rich honey-toned patina over time, with visible grain, small knots, and subtle surface markings that contribute to its authenticity and understated charm. The joinery at the corners remains visible, reinforcing the straightforward, utilitarian construction typical of English pieces of the period.

Its tall, narrow format makes it particularly versatile—well suited for use in a hallway, bedroom, or dressing area where a full-length reflection is desired without visual heaviness. The simplicity of the frame allows it to integrate easily into both traditional and more contemporary interiors, especially those favoring natural materials and quiet textures.

This is a piece that relies on proportion, patina, and honesty of material rather than decoration, offering a timeless and adaptable presence.
