ENGLISH REGENCY PERIOD FRUITWOOD GUÉRIDON SIDE TABLE WITH PIERCED BRASS GALLERY

$4,200

An English Regency period fruitwood guéridon side table from the 19th century with pierced brass three-quarter gallery, turned pedestal and tripod base. This exquisite English Regency period guéridon side table, dating back to the 19th century, is beautifully crafted from fruitwood. The table's top is distinguished by a pierced brass three-quarter gallery that adds an elegant decorative touch while also providing practical restraint for items placed upon it. The single central drawer offers discreet storage, subtly integrated within the table's sleek profile. The table stands on a finely turned pedestal that gracefully descends to a tripod base, ending in three curvaceous legs. This combination of design elements provides both stability and a delicate aesthetic. The natural warmth of the fruitwood is enhanced by the contrasting brass gallery, creating a piece that is both visually appealing and rich in character. Ideal for use in a living room, hallway, or bedroom, this guéridon table can serve as a standout side table next to a sofa or bed, or as an attractive display stand for art, photographs, or plants. Its compact size and functional elegance make it a versatile addition to any home, blending seamlessly with both traditional and contemporary interiors.
