FRENCH CIRCA 1900 TRAMP ART MIRROR WITH GEOMETRIC CHIP-CARVED FRAME

$2,995

This French Tramp Art mirror from circa 1900 features a bold rectangular frame with stepped corner projections and dense geometric chip carving throughout. The surface is covered with repeated triangular and notched carving, creating a strong textured pattern that catches the light and gives the frame a pronounced architectural quality. Unlike the more floral or crest-form Tramp Art mirrors, this example is more restrained and graphic, with a clean rectilinear silhouette and a rhythmic carved surface.

The wood has a warm medium-to-dark brown finish, with lighter tones visible along the raised carved edges and areas of age-related wear. The frame has good depth without being overly bulky, and the stepped corners give the mirror a distinctive Arts and Crafts-adjacent presence while remaining firmly within the handmade Tramp Art tradition. Its scale makes it useful over a small chest, console, sink, or in an entry or hallway.

The mirror plate appears later, which is common for antique mirrors of this type. The back has also likely been updated or reinforced, allowing the piece to remain functional while preserving the original carved wooden frame.
