FRENCH FAUX BAMBOO MIRROR WITH CANTED PEGS AND ORIGINAL GLASS, CIRCA 1900

$1,150

This French faux bamboo mirror, dating to circa 1900, offers a classic example of early 20th-century craftsmanship with an understated exotic twist. Its warm honey-toned frame mimics the segmented look of bamboo, a design that was highly fashionable in the late 19th and early 20th centuries for its blend of European elegance and Far Eastern inspiration.

Distinctive canted peg-like extensions at each corner give the silhouette a sculptural presence, evoking traditional joinery while remaining decorative in nature. The frame is crafted in wood with fine turning and carved ring details that enhance the faux bamboo illusion.

The mirror plate shows natural age-related foxing and mild desilvering, consistent with early glass but not extreme—suggesting the glass may be original or at least historically appropriate. The back retains its old wooden panel, with no signs of recent restoration.

Compact in size yet rich in style, this mirror would suit a powder room, entryway, or layered salon wall. Its character and patina make it a charming accent in traditional or eclectic interiors.
