FRENCH FAUX BAMBOO MIRROR WITH DARK MAHOGANY-TONED FRAME, CIRCA 1900

$2,650

A French faux bamboo mirror from circa 1900, featuring a richly stained turned wood frame with a deep reddish-brown, mahogany-toned patina. The rectangular frame is designed with vertical and horizontal rails carved with raised nodes to imitate natural bamboo, while the corners are accented with more elaborate turned finial-style details. The projecting ends and rounded knobs give the mirror a strong decorative silhouette, making it a handsome example of the French faux bamboo style popular at the turn of the 20th century.

The darker finish gives this piece a more formal and polished presence than lighter honey-toned faux bamboo mirrors, while still retaining the relaxed charm associated with bamboo-inspired design. Its scale works beautifully in an entryway, powder room, bedroom, dressing area, or above a chest, console, or small table. The warm dark tone pairs well with antique woods, leather, painted furniture, wicker, rattan, and layered traditional interiors.

With its sculptural frame, rich patina, and classic French country character, this mirror brings texture, depth, and antique warmth to a wall.
