FRENCH LOUIS-PHILIPPE PERIOD WALNUT FOUR-DOOR ENFILADE, CIRCA 1840

$22,500

A substantial French walnut enfilade dating to circa 1840, executed in the restrained and architectural manner associated with early to mid-19th-century provincial craftsmanship. The façade presents four paneled doors framed by molded surrounds, surmounted by four shallow frieze drawers fitted with brass ring pulls.

The walnut displays a warm, honey-toned patina with attractive grain movement across the door panels and top. The molded cornice edge and stepped base provide visual weight, while the bracket feet anchor the piece with quiet authority. The proportions are generous at 84 inches wide, offering strong horizontal presence suited to dining rooms, large kitchens, or gallery-style interiors.

Inside, the cabinet reveals practical storage behind each pair of doors, with later lining paper currently present. The interior construction and backboards reflect traditional mid-19th-century methods, reinforcing authenticity. The top shows honest age-related wear consistent with use over nearly two centuries, adding character without compromising integrity.

This enfilade balances simplicity and presence — refined enough for formal interiors yet grounded enough for rustic or country settings. A versatile and enduring example of French walnut case furniture from the Louis-Philippe period.
