FRENCH TRAMP ART MIRROR WITH GEOMETRIC CHIP-CARVED FRAME, CIRCA 1900

$2,250

A French Tramp Art mirror dating to circa 1900, featuring a richly textured hand-carved wooden frame with layered geometric decoration and deeply incised chip-carved motifs. The rectangular frame is composed of repeating triangular and linear patterns that create a rhythmic border around the mirror plate, giving the piece strong visual depth despite its compact scale.

Executed in dark-stained wood with a naturally aged surface, the mirror reflects the handcrafted folk-art character associated with Tramp Art objects from the late 19th and early 20th centuries. The carefully repeated carving patterns create a lively play of light and shadow, while subtle irregularities throughout the frame reinforce the handmade quality of the piece.

Its modest size makes it especially versatile, suitable for use in a powder room, entryway, hallway, cabin interior, or layered gallery wall. The carved frame pairs beautifully with rustic, Adirondack, folk art, and collected European interiors, while remaining understated enough for more minimal spaces.

The mirror retains a warm aged patina with wear consistent with age and use, contributing to its authentic antique character.
