LARGE FRENCH INDUSTRIAL IRON CHANDELIER WITH 12 LIGHTS, CIRCA 1920 - US WIRED

$4,800

Crafted in France circa 1920–1930, this striking iron chandelier combines industrial strength with refined decorative restraint. The circular frame, forged in wrought iron, presents a bold geometric structure suspended by four elegant chains that converge at an intricately cast canopy. The chandelier features twelve sockets arranged around the outer ring in pairs, each angled outward to provide balanced, even illumination. A second ring within reinforces the radial layout with architectural clarity. Original floral castings and flanged detailing on the stem and mount offer a subtle nod to the Art Deco aesthetic, without sacrificing the fixture's utilitarian core.

This piece has been professionally rewired for use in the United States, making it both functional and safe for modern interiors. With its generous proportions and open, airy form, this chandelier lends itself particularly well to larger dining rooms, kitchens, or entryways seeking a statement piece with authentic 20th-century character. Its matte iron finish adds depth and visual texture, allowing it to integrate effortlessly into both rustic and industrial-style interiors. A versatile and durable lighting solution with undeniable presence.
