LATE GEORGIAN OAK 19TH CENTURY DRESSER BASE WITH CHIPPENDALE BRASS HARDWARE

$9,600

An English late Georgian oak dresser base from the 19th century with bone inlay. This 19th-century English oak dresser base embodies timeless craftsmanship with its rich woodgrain and thoughtful detailing. The piece features five drawers adorned with elegant brass hardware in the Chippendale style, showcasing intricate backplates and drop handles that lend an air of classic refinement. Delicate bone escutcheons punctuate the upper drawers, adding a subtle contrast against the warm oak. Below, a graceful open shelf provides both visual lightness and functional storage, supported by finely turned legs and carved shell motifs that speak to its heritage. Whether styled as a traditional sideboard in a dining room, anchoring a living space, or repurposed as a unique console in a hallway, this dresser base exudes versatility. The top surface is ideal for displaying decorative accents, while the lower shelf can be used for baskets or books to keep your space organized. Its storied presence invites warmth and character, making it a statement piece that blends effortlessly with both contemporary and period interiors. Perfect for collectors or those seeking to add a touch of English charm, this oak dresser base brings practical elegance to any setting.
