MIDCENTURY JAMES MONT STYLE VERDIGRIS BRONZE TABLE LAMP WITH LUCITE BASE

$1,250

This Midcentury American table lamp channels the bold aesthetic of James Mont, known for blending Eastern and Western influences into sculptural, statement-making forms. Cast in bronze and finished in a richly mottled verdigris patina, the lamp features a striking classical silhouette with a flared base, baluster-style shaft, and urn-shaped upper section. A central band of low-relief scrollwork adds a layer of ornate texture that enhances the lamp's architectural profile without overwhelming its clean lines.

The subtly distressed surface evokes the timeless character of ancient bronzes, while the addition of a clear Lucite base gives the piece a modern lift, creating an elegant visual contrast between the old-world form and the sleek contemporary material. The lamp is topped with a single socket and harp holder, and has been recently rewired with a clear cord for immediate use.

Measuring 27 inches tall, this lamp offers dramatic vertical presence and would make a sophisticated addition to any interior—whether placed on a side table in a living room, a console in an entryway, or styled as a pair on a designer desk or nightstands.
