PAIR OF ENGLISH 19TH CENTURY OAK STOOLS WITH TURNED LEGS AND CUSTOM UPHOLSTERY

$8,995

A pair of English oak rectangular stools from the 19th century with turned legs raised on arrow feet and custom upholstery. This captivating pair of English oak stools from the 19th century effortlessly marries the rustic charm of oak with the refinement of turned legs, ending in arrow feet. The careful craftsmanship of the era is evident in the graceful turnings of the legs, offering a visual delight that grounds these pieces in the rich tradition of English furniture making. Custom upholstered in a tasteful linen fabric, these stools are accented with brass nailhead trim, adding a touch of elegance and ensuring the design remains cohesive and timeless. Ideal for a variety of settings within the contemporary home, these stools can serve multiple purposes. They could be placed at either end of a console table in a hallway, providing a spot to rest or to lay down a book. In the living room, they offer additional seating without commanding the visual space. The combination of oak and linen lends these pieces a versatility that could complement both traditional and modern decors, making them a valuable addition to any home looking to blend historical richness with practical elegance. Their presence speaks to a thoughtful selection of furnishings that appreciate the beauty of craftsmanship and the story of the past.
