PAIR OF ENGLISH 19TH CENTURY STOOLS WITH CARVED GREYHOUND SUPPORTS

$4,500

This striking pair of English stools dates to the 19th century and is distinguished by its sculptural carved supports in the form of stylized greyhounds. Executed with confident, naïve carving, the dogs form both the legs and visual focus of each stool, their elongated bodies and pawed feet lending a strong sense of movement and character. Pieces of this type sit at the intersection of functional furniture and folk-art-inflected decorative object.

Each stool is topped with a square upholstered seat, newly covered in a neutral linen-toned fabric and finished with a line of brass nailhead trim. The understated upholstery allows the carved woodwork to take precedence while making the stools easy to integrate into a variety of interiors. The frames retain a dark, time-softened surface, with wear and patina consistent with age, reinforcing their authenticity.

Structurally, the stools are well constructed, with stretchers connecting the carved supports and providing stability without interrupting the silhouette. Their proportions make them versatile in use: as occasional seating, footstools, accent pieces in a library or entry hall, or even flanking a console or fireplace.

Carved animal furniture from this period is increasingly difficult to find in matched pairs. Decorative yet practical, these stools offer a strong graphic presence and a distinctly English character rooted in 19th-century craftsmanship and design.
