PAIR OF ENGLISH REGENCY CARVED MAHOGANY 19TH CENTURY STOOLS WITH SCROLLING ARMS

$12,600

A pair of English Regency mahogany stools from the 19th century with large scrolling arms and legs, carved foliage and tiger style upholstered seats. Imbue your home with the distinguished charm of the 19th-century English Regency period with this exquisite pair of mahogany stools. Beautifully crafted from rich mahogany wood, these seats represent the epitome of Regency-era craftsmanship, showcasing a timeless blend of practical function and elaborate aesthetics. The majestic allure of these stools is characterized by their large scrolling arms and legs, a stylistic hallmark of the Regency period. The carving of foliage on the wooden frame adds an element of organic elegance, reflecting the era's penchant for natural motifs. The petite feet grounding the design exude an understated grace, balancing the grandeur of the overall structure. Further enhancing the seats' appeal is the striking tiger style upholstery. The bold pattern lends a unique visual interest to the pieces, creating a captivating interplay between the classic mahogany framework and the daring textile design. It captures an unexpected, yet harmonious, juxtaposition of traditional craftsmanship and bold design choices. Each of these Regency mahogany stools is more than just a seating solution - they are a statement of style, encapsulating the grandeur of a bygone era while seamlessly fitting into contemporary interiors. Whether placed in a living room, bedroom, or study, they are sure to elevate your decor with their regal elegance and intriguing design narrative.
