PAIR OF FRENCH 19TH CENTURY COPPER TABLE LAMPS WITH VERDIGRIS PATINA, US-WIRED

$5,500

A pair of French hexagonal copper architectural elements from the 19th century with verdigris patina, made into table lamps on lucite bases, wired for the USA. This distinctive pair of table lamps combines the rustic elegance of 19th-century French architectural elements with contemporary design. Crafted from copper with a verdigris patina, these lamps feature hexagonal bodies, each facet beautifully adorned with traditional decorative motifs, highlighting their architectural origin. The verdigris copper imparts an antique charm and a touch of historical depth to the pieces. Mounted on matching hexagonal lucite bases, these lamps are a masterful blend of old and new. The transparent lucite provides a modern twist, creating an illusion of the copper floating above the surface, which adds to their visual allure. Wired for the USA with single sockets, these lamps are both functional and artistic. Perfect for adding a statement to any interior, these lamps can be placed in a living room beside sofas, on bedside tables for an eclectic touch in a bedroom, or on a console table in an entryway to impress guests. Their unique design and historical character make them ideal for homes decorated with both antique and contemporary furnishings, offering soft lighting and a striking decorative presence.
