PAIR OF FRENCH COPPER HANGING LANTERNS WITH LEAF MOTIFS AND CANOPY, CIRCA 1900

$3,995

This elegant pair of French copper lanterns dates to circa 1900 and reflects the refined craftsmanship typical of turn-of-the-century architectural lighting. Each lantern features a gently faceted body fitted with clear glass panels, allowing light to illuminate the interior from all angles while emphasizing the sculptural quality of the metalwork.

The lanterns are distinguished by their decorative copper crowns, adorned with applied leaf motifs that add subtle movement and texture to the design. The domed tops taper gracefully toward the suspension ring, while the lower portion echoes the same architectural lines, creating a balanced and harmonious silhouette. Over time, the copper has developed a soft, natural patina that enhances the character and authenticity of the pieces.

The lanterns are suspended from a decorative chain and include their original-style canopy, making them ready for installation in a variety of settings. They are particularly well suited for entryways, covered porches, hallways, or stairwells, where their vertical presence and classic European character can be fully appreciated.

Professionally rewired for use in the United States, the lanterns are ready for modern electrical systems while retaining their antique appearance. Their compact proportions allow them to work beautifully in pairs, bringing warmth and historic charm to both traditional and transitional interiors.
