PAIR OF FRENCH LOUIS XVI 18TH CENTURY PAINTED CONSOLE TABLES WITH MARBLE TOPS

$27,500

A pair of French Louis XVI period antique white painted console tables from the 18th century with marble tops, carved stacked coin style frieze and fluted legs. This pair of French Louis XVI period console tables, dating back to the 18th century, exudes a sense of timeless elegance with their antique white painted finish and intricate details. Each table boasts a beautiful variegated grey and brown marble top, adding a touch of natural beauty and sophistication. The tables' single drawers are adorned with a unique carved stacked coin style frieze, complemented by ring pulls. Resting on four fluted legs, these console tables are united by an unusual X-Form carved stretcher, showcasing the exquisite craftsmanship typical of the Louis XVI period. The patina, characterized by some weathering, enhances the tables' historical charm and tells a story of their rich past. In a contemporary or traditional home setting, these console tables could serve as focal points in an entryway, living room, or dining room, offering both decorative appeal and practical storage space. They could be used to display art pieces, family heirlooms, or floral arrangements, thereby blending seamlessly with both modern and classic interior designs. Their historical elegance and refined details make them a sophisticated addition to any home, inviting conversation and admiration.
