PAIR OF TALL CLEAR GLASS HURRICANE SHADES, ENGLISH CIRCA 1900

$1,800

This handsome pair of tall hurricane glass shades dates to circa 1900 and was made in England. Handblown in clear glass, each piece features the subtle variations and tiny air bubbles that naturally occur in early glass production, offering charm and authenticity. The curvaceous silhouette, with gently flared rims and swelling midsections, lends itself beautifully to both traditional and transitional interiors.

These versatile hurricanes were originally designed to shelter candlelight from drafts, making them ideal companions for candlesticks, wall sconces, or lantern bases. Today, they can be paired with antique brass holders, integrated into custom lighting designs, or simply used on a mantelpiece or dining table to evoke ambient glow and vintage refinement. Their scale—tall and commanding without being bulky—makes them especially well-suited for entryways or console displays where height is needed.

The glass is in good condition, showing only minor signs of age and wear. Their timeless form and enduring clarity make this pair a practical and decorative addition to a range of interior settings.
