RUSTIC PAIR OF FAUX BOIS MIDCENTURY TROUGH SHAPED CONCRETE PLANTERS

$5,500

A pair of faux-bois trough shaped planters from the Midcentury period, made of concrete and accented with grey and orange tones. Breathe an air of rustic charm into your garden with this pair of Midcentury faux-bois trough-shaped planters. Each planter, meticulously crafted from concrete, is a delightful homage to the beauty of wood, flawlessly mimicking its natural texture and form. The dexterous artistry of the faux-bois technique is on full display, and the result is a mesmerizing blend of durability and woodland allure.

A symphony of grey and orange tones plays across the surface of these planters. This palette breathes life into the planters, ensuring that they not only serve as receptacles for your flora but also as stand-alone art pieces that captivate and soothe the senses.

Their tapering lines evoke a sense of gentle harmony, while the weathered appearance lends an authentic vintage character that speaks volumes of the planters' rich historical roots. This weathering not only bolsters their aesthetic appeal but also accentuates their kinship with the natural world.

The planters sit with grace and stability, ready to cradle your plants in their robust embrace. Whether adorned with effervescent blooms or verdant greenery, this pair of planters will be a delightful addition to your outdoor space.
