SET OF THREE AMERICAN GOLF SCENE OIL PAINTINGS, CIRCA 1920

$4,500

This delightful set of three American oil paintings, created circa 1920, captures the leisurely spirit and growing popularity of golf during the early twentieth century. Each composition depicts a different moment on the course, from a carefully measured putt to a confident drive and groups of players pausing to observe the game. The figures are dressed in period golfing attire, complete with tweed caps, knickerbockers, patterned stockings, and traditional wooden clubs, offering an engaging glimpse into the sport's golden age.

Painted with a light, cheerful palette, the scenes feature softly rolling greens, blue skies, and delicate spring foliage that lend the works an inviting, nostalgic quality. Though modest in scale, the artist paid close attention to the personalities and interactions of the golfers, creating narrative scenes full of warmth and gentle humor. Each painting is signed with the initials "C.M."

Presented in matching gilt wood frames, the three paintings form a cohesive decorative ensemble. Displayed together in a study, game room, library, office, clubhouse, or golf-themed interior, they celebrate both the elegance of the game and the relaxed camaraderie that has long been part of its appeal.
