SIGNED ANTHONY REDMILE SAWFISH DECORATIVE OBJECTS MOUNTED ON BRASS BASES, 1970S

$8,995

A pair of signed Anthony Redmile English sawfish decorative objects from circa 1970 mounted on brass bases. This exquisite pair of decorative objects, created by Anthony Redmile in circa 1970, features signed sawfish rostrums, showcasing the unique and striking aspect of natural history art. Mounted on elegant brass bases, these pieces are distinguished by their impressive craftsmanship and the intriguing beauty of the sawfish's elongated snout, studded with tooth-like projections. The integration of natural elements with sophisticated brass mounts reflects Redmile's renowned ability to transform the wonders of the natural world into high-end decorative pieces. The sawfish rostrums, with their rich textures and form, make a bold statement, while the polished brass bases add a touch of luxury and stability. Ideal for the discerning collector or as a focal point in a study, living room, or hallway, these sawfish decorative objects can add a sense of intrigue and conversation to any space. Their historical significance and artistic merit make them not just decorative items but pieces of art that reflect a fascination with the natural world and high craftsmanship. Positioned on a mantelpiece, displayed within a cabinet of curiosities, or as standalone pieces on a console table, they serve as a testament to the elegance and mystery of nature, beautifully captured through Redmile's visionary design. Their distinctive presence enriches any home with a blend of natural history and refined taste, appealing to both collectors of unique art and lovers of bespoke interior design.
