SPANISH 18TH CENTURY WALNUT FRATINO TABLE WITH CARVED LEGS AND IRON STRETCHER

$16,000

A Baroque style walnut Fratino table from the 18th century with wrought-iron stretchers. A striking example of Spanish Baroque craftsmanship, this 18th-century walnut Fratino table captivates with its sculptural presence and rich patina. The rectangular top, composed of a well-aged walnut single plank, boasts a timeworn surface that enhances its storied character. Resting upon boldly carved lyre-shaped trestle legs, this table displays the hallmark elegance of Spanish monastery and refectory tables, where strength meets refined ornamentation.

The hand-carved scroll motifs along the legs exude a sense of movement, further accentuated by the scalloped apron on each side that adds depth and visual intrigue. A gracefully curved wrought-iron stretcher, forged with delicate twists and secured by decorative finials, reinforces the structure while lending a touch of Old World authenticity. The deep walnut tones, warm and inviting, highlight the natural grain, ensuring this table's ability to blend seamlessly into both traditional and modern interiors.

Whether used as a console, writing desk, or center table, this Spanish Fratino table circa 1700s brings an undeniable sense of history and elegance, effortlessly elevating any study, dining room, or grand entryway.
