TRAMP ART DEMI-LUNE CONSOLE TABLE WITH GEOMETRIC MARQUETRY, CIRCA 1900

$2,700

This early 20th-century demi-lune table is a striking example of Tramp Art craftsmanship, distinguished by its intricate geometric inlay and sculptural presence. The tabletop features an elaborate marquetry design, a layered arrangement of precisely cut wood pieces forming a dynamic interplay of squares and triangles. A banded border encircles the top, enhancing its architectural quality. Resting on tapered legs with inlaid accents, the table maintains a light, structured silhouette that balances its decorative surface.

The half-moon shape makes it a natural choice for an entryway, where it can serve as a refined landing spot for keys and decorative objects. Against a hallway wall, it provides a sculptural focal point, adding depth and texture to a narrow space. In a living or dining area, its compact profile allows for easy placement behind a sofa or as a side table with a curated vignette.

With its precise craftsmanship and distinctive character, this Tramp Art table is both functional and highly decorative. The rich contrast of wood tones highlights its meticulous design, making it an eye-catching addition to interiors that celebrate artistry, history, and handmade detail.
